Urban Strategies Council

November 6, 2015
Meeting Notes

Phone call with:
- Junios Williams – Chief Executive Officer
- Bobby Stalll – Program Housing Economic Development

Figure out a way to engage base groups with constituents most affected by policy decisions
- ACCE
- OCO
- Just Cause
- Black Lives Matter
- EBASE

Input and insights into how the plan addresses equity issues
- Recognize differences
- Different populations require different approaches
- Emerging Movements (such as “#” and facebook groups)

When meeting individually with members of disadvantaged groups
- Ground rules (expect to be treated with respect)
- We must address these problems together
- Recognize that we are government. We are dealing with things that are private property issues
- Better understanding issues of disadvantaged people through the lens of what we can do through lens of plan
- More contact with residents in fear of being pushed out

When meeting with large groups (public workshops, etc.)
- Hopefully they are more receptive if they’ve been reached out to individually
- Consider meeting structure and the way they take action
- Reach out to groups that broker conversations ACCE, OCO, Causa Justa (ask them to help facilitate)

City’s inability to get a larger citywide equity

Effective short term strategies / long term strategies about displacement
- Concrete evidence 2-3 things that seem to stem the tide in short term
- How to incorporate into city policy
If you have ideas that have worked, let’s get those out there
Steve King – Portland / other cities around
Strategies of bringing people back
Priority to people who were displaced to come back to City Of Oakland

Equitable Economic Development Strategies
- EB EDA first economic development report
- Income lag ➔ part of problem analysis is income
- Med/manufacturing – we will attract in those opportunity zones and train workforce
- Clean tech. They have demand ➔ consumer (middle-income jobs)
  - Not enough for Oaklanders
  - Where is engine to get Oaklanders trained and in jobs
- Target construction and ICT IT support (credential certificate)
- More prominent discussion about income and employment opportunities

Guiding principles and values
- Value Statement
  - That this process cares about the people that suffered through all these periods of disinvestment
  - Sweat equity for staying and we owe something to them and their children
- Policies align with values

Equity in process and equity in outcome

Send the vision and PowerPoint (of the Downtown Plan drafts) with narrative for groups (such as Causa Justa, OCO, etc.) to respond to:
- 5 questions for discussion
- Record your responses and send back
- Build broader community participation

Data
- Ambivalence about role of data (hard to get data disaggregated down reliability, i.e., unemployment rate data – hard to accurately track the unemployed Downtown, for example)
- Income by race / ethnicity
- Pop.
- Source then Census to get to more granular level
- Real trouble around Census data especially around margins of error
Urban Strategies Council

- Careful about relying on data (people have different experiences than just quantitative aspects of their lives/neighborhoods)
- Urban Strategies Council would like to get a copy of any new source data

Qilombo

Qilombo

December 13, 2015
Meeting Notes

During a Sunday community breakfast, two members of Qilombo described the history of the organization and current initiatives, which include supporting the community through shared meals, literature, office equipment, workspace, community building, and support in radical activism. The members explained that they vehemently oppose gentrification and, while they appreciate that staff attended their weekly community breakfast, they would never get behind a plan that they feel pushes Black people farther to the margins of the Bay Area to make room for big businesses, etc.
An ACCE Oakland office staff member described ACCE’s work in Oakland (focused on housing, transit and worker justice) and the way ACCE takes on new initiatives. Since it is a member-based organization, the members decide which initiatives are most critical for them, and therefore, where they will devote their resources. The staff member explained that while they appreciate the City reaching out, they are an advocacy organization and use a variety of tactics that include forming strategic alliances and leading demonstrations, etc. in addition to meetings with City staff. At this time, their efforts are focused in East Oakland neighborhoods they would engage if this project would have a meaningful impact for their members.
